

To Our Dedicated and Hard-Working Clients:

As this spring's COVID-19 closures ushered in uncertainty and change in the world and in education, it has been our pleasure to work side-by-side with you in navigating the legal challenges, hurdles, and roadblocks you have faced.

With the "virtual" end of the school year behind you, we know your focus has now shifted to planning for a return to in-person instruction in the fall. Such preparations, once again, have raised many practical and legal questions—from employment issues, to general student issues, to special education questions, to campus visitors, to funding, and a host of other areas.

Each of you has unique needs and concerns to address, and our education law team at Osborn Maledon stands ready to assist you in working through the legal aspects of your COVID-19/school reopening concerns. While these concerns will undoubtedly vary from school to school, our experienced team is adept at finding the legal answers—or when no clear legal answer exists, helping you chart the safest possible course through the unsettled minefields.

One area we are currently focusing on is COVID-19 related employment policies and practices. On behalf of a consortium of charter-school clients, we are developing a set of policies and best practices that address novel issues that schools will be confronting in this area when employees and students return to school. Please let us know if you would be interested in joining that consortium, and we can provide you with pricing information.

Regardless of your area of need, we look forward to continuing our partnership and helping you help your students successfully transition back to the on-campus learning environment.
